

LCPS Mission Statement

We seek to unite artists from beginner to professional who are interested in the pastel medium and to serve their needs by encouraging artistic growth and development through education and sharing. We also work to create public awareness of pastel as a unique and beautiful art form.

From the President

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

It is January already, a brand new year with exciting activities brewing within LCPS. Remember to renew your LCPS membership so you don't miss anything!

We kick off 2020 with our annual January Paint-In on Saturday, January 25, from 11am – 4pm. This is always a fun time to get together with fellow LCPS members and paint within the comfort of four walls and a roof overhead, during what is often the coldest time of the year. Bring your pastels, a bag lunch, and enjoy a day of painting and camaraderie with your pastel friends. See our calendar for details!

Art Weeks and Susan Estill have arranged for our first exhibit of 2020, which will take place at the Paradise Center for the Arts in Faribault. Entry is now open, with final postmark deadline January 16. The prospectus is available on our website.

Our Workshop Committee, Eileen France and Becky Jokela, have been working hard for us, and this year brings two 3-day workshop presentations (instead of our traditional single 5-day). Perhaps the shortened timeframe will be easier for some of us to schedule into our busy lives. That also means double the opportunity to study and learn from masters of the pastel world right here in our own hometown.

In June Nancie King Mertz will visit us to teach a 3-day workshop (June 8-9-10). She is a master at painting beautiful urban scenes! I can't wait to see what she shares in her workshop. Visit her website for inspiration: <https://nanciekingmertz.com>

Then in September, Karen Margulis will also teach a 3-day workshop for us (September 14-15-16). Karen shares many creative tips and techniques on pasteling and marketing on her blog, Patreon page, and YouTube. Karen's website: <https://karenmargulis.com>

Each of these accomplished pastelists will bring us valuable information that you won't want to miss! Studying with others expands the mind, opening us to new ideas and techniques. I always take copious notes and review them immediately after any workshop so that I am able to edit and complete any hastily jotted thoughts while the presentation is still fresh in my mind. And I keep a file of all the workshops I have ever attended so I can refer to them when I need a creative boost! While at first it may seem overwhelming to absorb and incorporate the newly learned ideas into our work, I often find that my new knowledge sits in my head for a while, and just when I feel like I'm in a painting rut, a spark ignites and offers a fresh approach to my work.

So, these are just some of the highlights to look forward to in 2020 with LCPS. All of our board members work hard behind the scenes to keep things running smoothly, and to bring our

Time is marching on. Don't wait for the perfect moment to create. Do it now.

To quote Edgar Degas

"You must aim high, not in what you are going to do at some future date, but in what you are going to make yourself do today. Otherwise, working is just a waste of time."

November Meeting "Paint-Around"

Our November 12th meeting held the annual fun and educational pastel paint-around. Six of us bravely volunteered to lug our easels, pastels, and other painting needs to the evening's event. After a short formal meeting we proceeded to set up our stations in areas around the room easily accessible to the other members. Some artists preferred to stand at their easels. Others, myself included, decided to sit while working. Rules were stated, timer started, and we were off in clouds of dust! (Just kidding about that last part.) Members were free to walk around the room, watch as they chose, ask questions, or offer tips themselves. Every ten minutes the paintings would shift to the artist to the left.

The first ten minutes were used to block in our pieces in any way we chose. Time sure flies when you're focused! Subject matter was left up to individual artists — we worked on three landscapes, two florals, and a kitchen still life. Each gave us different challenges - from dealing with large expanses of dilute sky tones to tiny details in large leaves to creating bits of apple for a waiting pie!

As the time segments ticked by the paintings became more and more finessed. It was sometimes difficult to decide whether to work over the surface of a whole surface or to focus on a particular area. I tried to photograph each piece as it arrived on the easel, and then again after ten minutes. Eye opening! Perhaps try this in your own studio? As in other areas of life lots can get done if it must get done.

After we all took our turns at each other's paintings we got ten last minutes in which to finish up as best we could. We all got busy doing what we could to mirror the visions we'd first seen in our heads. Time's up! We lined up with our work for members to discuss and/or admire. We all agreed that it had been an evening well spent. It had been agreed to beforehand that the finished paintings could be offered at auction at the end of the paint around, so after a bit of spirited bidding two or three paintings went home with happy buyers!

If you have never dared to participate as an artist in a paint-around of any kind I suggest you give it a try — at least once. You may gain new appreciation for marks put down by other artists, consider new techniques, and maybe learn other ways in which to focus.

I certainly learned new ways by which to create — and hope that my five brave easel-mates did the same!

Class Opportunity with Lisa Stauffer

■ Exploring Underpainting for Pastel & Other Media

Play with the possibilities that a loose underpainting can provide for the abstract foundation of your painting.

Experiment with a variety of media to create colorful and textural designs to paint on. These will include watercolor, oil stain, inks, gesso and more to begin your paintings with abandon! These underpaintings will work for nearly any media, instructor demonstrations will continue in pastel. Bring photos, paintings, field studies of subjects that you love to paint so that you have a familiarity with your subject already—that allows you more freedom to experiment in class. This class works well for all opaque mediums such as pastel, acrylic, gouache and even watercolor! Material fee provides underpainting materials, see supply list for what to bring from home.

Member Profile — Deborah Damgaard-Hansen

The LCPS has gone international! Deborah Damgaard-Hansen from Soenderborg, Denmark joined LCPS this fall expanding our membership to Europe. Her current residence near Soenderborg, Denmark is new to her. It is near the border of Germany and is the hometown of her Danish husband. Prior to this recent move, Deborah and her husband and 3 children lived for 17 years in the opposite corner of Denmark—the northwest portion of Denmark known as Thy. Thy is an area of mostly wilderness, wind, and dramatic seacoast. (As a point of comparison, Deborah explains that Denmark is about ¼ the size of Minnesota.)

Damgaard-Hansen's connections to Minnesota run deep.

A native of Bemidji, Deborah attended St. Olaf earning a BA in Fine Art. During her senior year at St. Olaf she spent a year abroad at the art school in Oslo, Norway. Following her graduation from St. Olaf, she lived alternately in Minneapolis and Oslo. She took part-time classes at the various classical realism art schools. She eventually met her husband while living in Oslo and their first home was in the Valdres Valley of Central Norway. Eventually they moved to Minnesota spending 4 years in International Falls, and 10 years in New Germany near Waconia.

Before moving their family of 5 from Minnesota to Denmark in 2002, Deborah took plein air workshops in Minnesota whenever she could to become prepared for the visual treat in store for her as an artist heading to Denmark. Her favorite subjects have become rolling landscapes, Danish architecture, Copenhagen street scenes, and lots of still life with Danish household items. Preferring to paint ala prima, "I'm not much into working from photographs," she says. Deborah has received many commissions to paint homes and cabins. A devotee of fairy tales since she was a child, Hans Christian Anderson has been a long time influence for Deborah. But she is still waiting for the right moment to paint the iconic Little Mermaid statute in Copenhagen. She has yet to find that magic moment.

In Denmark, abstract art still rules and pastels are a rare medium. Deborah has become somewhat of a 'pastel ambassador' in Denmark. Despite her training in oil, she describes pastel as her 'go to' medium. "I love the subtle color blending possible with pastels," she explains. She is still using some of the same pastels she purchased years ago—Yarkas, Rembrandts, and Senneliers. "I've added Schminckes because they are available here and mix well with the Senneliers," Deborah adds. She paints on Uart paper or Sennelier card in a variety of colors. And she travels with her Dakota Pastels easel. She has painted in England, Norway, Sweden, Portugal and the Faroe Islands.

Damgaard-Hansen has two paintings in the current LCPS show at the St. Paul Monastery. She describes this exhibit as one more typical to a Danish art exhibit. "At a Danish art exhibit, there would never be prizes given out, as there is a deep cultural reluctance to stick out from the crowd," she explains. She also participated this past fall in the Grand Marais Plein Air Festival and described the Quick Paint as her favorite part of the event—and a great experience. Not one drop of Lake Superior water got on her Sennelier card despite the extreme winds and spray. Damgaard-Hansen was recently named "Artist of the Year for 2019" at a local cultural event held in October in Thy where she is known as "the crazy American Pastel Lady". She described this honor as a lovely ending to her years living in the Thy area.

Along with LCPS, Damgaard-Hansen is a member of the Pastel Society of America, Pastel Guild of Europe, Outdoor Painters of MN, and Kunstpunkt (an artists' society in Augustenborg Denmark near her new home). She thanks LCPS for the warm welcome she's received as the new European member!
